

William Horne in his own words.

Hello. I'm doing what I always enjoy during a campaign—I'm going door to door and talking with our neighbors. People are concerned by current events, and so am I. Here are some of the things I hear about the most ...

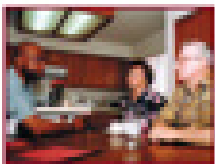

People are worried about the economy.

We don't have to look far to see for sale signs on houses or hear about the foreclosure down the street. I just returned from a Legislative Special Session where we had to cut an additional $275 million dollars from Nevada's budget. I will continue to vote to keep Nevada's budget balanced, but some of these cuts hurt.

I hear a lot about public safety.

I serve on the Judiciary Committee which reviews all the criminal laws. We work closely with law enforcement to give our police and prosecutors the tools they need, and we are trying to stay one step ahead of the criminals.

Health care hits the news—and our pocketbooks.

I've been part of the fight to make health care more affordable and accessible. Now we need to make sure it's safe. We won't change things overnight, but we are working towards long-term solutions.

Our schools are always a topic.

My children are in, or soon to be in, our public school system including the higher education system. As a parent, I've been impressed by the dedication of the teachers my kids have, but I am very concerned when we have to cut the textbook fund to balance the budget. I will continue my fight for decent schools.

Taxes are on the minds of many.

I voted to put a cap on property taxes to protect homeowners from tax inflation as their properties increased in value. Now, with housing prices and our economy down, the new challenge is finding how to pay for essential services. I believe the families in our part of town are paying their fair share already. I will insist that any tax policy be fair, stable and accountable to you.
